

In a chemical reaction the breaking of bonds in the reactant molecules is an endothermic process and the making of bonds when the products form is an exothermic process.