

Metals conduct electricity because they have delocalised electrons in their structure.