

1 Solid sodium chloride conducts electricity because electrons in it are free to move through the structure.

2 Molten sodium chloride conducts electricity because ions become free to move through the solution.

Which of these statements are correct?